About Colin:

Colin focuses on maintenance and improvement of The Firm's technology infrastructure and on helping The Firm's trial attorneys and other legal professionals make use of infrastructure and applications to manage large, complex cases and present them effectively in court.

In particular, Colin manages The Firm's kCura Relativity and e-discovery document processing systems, which streamline the e-discovery process, make large amounts of raw data searchable, and provide access to case critical information in real time. He is also a Relativity Certified Administrator and applies his extensive knowledge of this software review platform to provide support to the Reilly trial teams.

Prior to joining The Firm as an intern in 2009, Colin worked for an information technology consulting firm, where he performed server, backup and network maintenance and administration.

Colin graduated summa cum laude from Metropolitan State University of Denver in 2012 with a bachelor's degree in Computer Information Systems and a minor in Linguistics. He has participated in an international business program and spent a summer at the University of Economics in Prague, Czech Republic and completed a backpacking course in Wyoming's Wind River Range with the National Outdoor Leadership School ("NOLS"). Colin is currently pursuing a master's degree in socio-cultural anthropology at Columbia University while he continues to work at The Firm.
